These words have to be memorized because decoding them is really difficult. Students are taught to memorize sight words as a whole, by sight, so that they can recognize them immediately (within three seconds) and read them without having to use decoding skills.Put simply, sight words are words that we teach our young readers to know by heart. That way, they dont have to spend valuable time decoding them. The words are presented in 15 lists (10 words per list) and ranked by frequency. It was loosely based on the Dolch Sight Words and Fry Sight Words for English words. I have removed the common nouns and color words that were included in those lists to be able to add the more frequently used Filipino words. Though I tried to keep related Filipino words together, I had to consider the frequency of certain words. So words that you think are related (Filipino pronouns, for example) are not all listed in the same list.Each page has 3 lists and each list has 10 words. You can cut the page along the dashed lines to have 3 lists. You also need to cut off both left and right edges to make two the lists the same size as the one in the middle.The lists can be given in order from Listahan 1 to Listahan 15. The learner can be asked to master reading, spelling, and writing the words on the list before he or she is given the next one. The learner or parent/teacher/tutor can color, shade, or check the box beside the word that the learner has already mastered.Parents/Teachers/Tutors can also compile the 15 lists to make a booklet for the learner. Ive added a page with covers for the booklet. The learners name can be written on the cover. This resource was made using clip art images from Dazzling Clips.This list is featured in one of my products in my TeachersPayTeachers Store (Oliotopia). Sight words are common words that schools expect kids to recognize instantly. Words like the, it, and appear so often that beginning readers reach the point where they no longer need to try to sound out these words. They recognize them by sight. Building up a large base of sight words helps kids become faster, more fluent readers. When kids master a sight word, they no longer have to pause to blend its letter-sounds together. And they dont have to think about spelling rules.Free Download Basic Sight Words in PDF FORMAT Learners at the earlier grade levels will benefit the most from these activities. It is part of the beginning reading process where one should master reading the commonly-used words to develop fluency and be ready to the next level.These words are often used in almost all reading materials from grade 1 and above. Hence, the mastery of reading these words is but imperative. It will dictate whether or not the learner is ready to proceed to the stage of his/her reading journey.NOTE: You MUST BE LOGGED IN to your GMAIL ACCOUNT to be able to download these materials. DOLCH WORD LIST (Free Download) Reviewed by DepEd Click on March 31, 2020 Rating: 5 While Dolch created specific lists of sight words to learn at each grade level, each Dolch sight word list is only meant to provide parents and teachers with a road map and sequence for helping children acquire the words that they will encounter most frequently in their reading. Each list is merely a recommendation. If a child masters all of the words on the grade level list before the end of the school year, parents and teachers should feel free to move on to the next list. Similarly, if a child does not commit all of the words on a list to memory by the end of the recommended school year, adults working with the child should continue to help him or her learn all sight words on the previous years list before moving on to the next grade levels list.Kindergarten -1st grade Dolch Sight Word ListThe heaviest emphasis on mastering sight words should come in the primary grades. Because a few words are used so often in English language texts, providing children with access to them gives them tremendous advantages as developing readers. Sight word mastery is one of the keys to fluent reading. Young children already have these high frequency words in their verbal vocabularies. Teaching them to read the words simply requires connecting each sight word in the child's memory to the written version of the word.Dolchs pre-primer list of 40 words is recommended for students in grades K and 1. This list includes the most frequently occurring words in childrens books. A, and, for, in, is, it, said, the and to are the building blocks of this list. After learning the pre-primer list, children should be taught the primer list. This list consists of 52 words and includes at, be, but, came, did, do, he, into, no, on, saw, she, was, with and yes. Concurrent with learning the pre-primer and primer lists, children are also encouraged to commit Dolchs list of 95 high frequency nouns to memory. This list includes nouns often used in childrens daily lives such as brother, sister, ball and goodbye as well as those used for special occasions that are particularly important to many youngsters (birthday, party, cake, Christmas, Santa Clause).While Dolch recommended that children learn all of the words on the pre-primer list by the end of first grade, other sources suggest that children learn all 220 of the service words as well as the 95 frequently used nouns by the end of the first grade. Parents and teachers should set goals for their childrens sight word learning based on their individual needs, interests and abilities.Children 2-3 Dolch Sight Word ListAI-enhanced title and descriptionSaveSave DOLCH BASIC SIGHT WORDS - English Tagalog For Later100%(1)100% found this document useful, undefined100%(4)100% found this document useful (4 votes)4K viewsAng dokumento ay naglalaman ng mga pangunahing salita na dapat matutunan ng mga bata. So there's lots of great options to fit everyone's needs.Education.comgranted me permission to share a sample activity from the activity section on their site with you. I think I'm going to use it for our Multicultural Family Art Night at school this year. It would also be a great activity for teaching feelings and emotions. I love that for our special needs kiddos, there is no wrong or right when it comes to expressing yourself through art.Sample Activity>Create a Cubist Self-Portraits your child a budding artist?Support his creative nature by helping him to learn about art styles, and work on art process explorations. The cubist movement began in the twentieth century with the creation of abstract, broken up works of art. Translate this into a fun activity for young students by encouraging cubism-inspired art made at home.The cubist collage self-portrait activity will help your child to better observe, analyze, and reconstruct his own imaginative thoughts. Additionally, it reinforcesbasic math skillssuch as geometry, tpmotions self-awareness, and can even help build aesthetic awareness. Moreover, he'll learn a little art history while he's at it!What You Need:Construction paper (at least two pieces)PencilScissorsCrayons, oilpastels, or markersMirrorWhat You Do:Ask your child to take a look in the mirror. What does he see? How does the face change with each expression of emotion he makes?Now it's time for your child to create a pencil drawn self-portrait. This can be a close up of just the face, neck, and shoulders or a full length portrait.Have your child color in the pencil self-portrait with crayons or makers. For added fun, try oil pastels. Using these soft, crayons-like utencils is a great way to introduce your child todifferent artistic tools.After the self-portrait is finished, have your child cut the drawing into pieces that form geometric shapes. Make sure that the pieces are not too small.Have your child rearrange and reassemble the cut-out shapes of his portrait. Then, have himglue them down on a blank sheet of construction paper. He should rearrange them in a way that makes a completely new abstract portrait. Let his imagination run wild! There are no limits to the ways in which he styles his composition.Enjoy your child's abstract cubist collage!Try extending this project by asking your child to create several self-portrait collages. Each work of art can be varied by altering the facial gestures, their arrangement, and even the colors used. Ask your child to choose colors that connect with the emotion in the drawing. For example, a sad picture may be blue while a happy portrait could be bright yellow. Which resource categories are you most excited about?
