If you're an iOS loyalist, you have only a handful of current smartphones to choose from: iPhone SE, iPhone 6s or 6s Plus, or the latest models, iPhone 7 and 7 Plus. On the Android side, it's a very different story, with tons of smartphones from companies including LG, HTC, Google, Samsung and Sony. You want variety? Android gives you variety. So you decided to make the switch. But how do you move all your iPhone stuff to an Android? A new backup feature in the Google Drive iOS app can help. Google recently added a feature to the Google Drive app for iOS that helps you switch to Android. (Google, of course, has a vested interest in helping you make that switch.) The backup feature saves your contacts, calendar events, photos and videos to Google Drive. From there, you can easily download that content to your new Android device, using the Drive Android app. If you already use Google Calendar and Gmail on your iPhone, you don't need to backup your appointments or email. To access the backup feature, open the Google Drive app, go to Settings > Backup, and choose to backup contacts, calendar events, and photos and videos. Be aware, however, that the process can take hours, especially if you have lots of photos and video on your phone. GoogleIt's also worth noting that Google outlined the steps for migrating iPhone data to a Google Pixel smartphone, which includes copying contacts and downloaded music, though there are some exceptions. How to move iPhone text messages, music and videos to Android Moving your Apple Message conversations to your Android device can be trickier. The free iSMS2droid app is a popular choice that takes some — but not all — of the pain out of the process. Samsung's Smart Switch software can help transfer messages, as well as music, photos, videos and more from an iOS, BlackBerry or other Android device, though it's designed for use with Samsung products. Transferring music files from your iPhone to an Android device can also be a little complicated. I recommend the freemium doubleTwist Music Player app. It isn't perfect — it currently doesn't support podcast sync, for instance — but it's a good starting point. Of course, your iOS apps won't work on Android, though Android versions of the same software may be available. Also, you might want to check out Android Authority's helpful step-by-step guide for transferring content from iTunes to Android, or Digital Trends' "How to switch from iOS to Android without missing a beat." What if you jump over to Android, live there for a while, and regret your move. Apple's Move to iOS guide should help you find your way back. (Image credit: Apple) If you've decided to swap from an Android to an Apple device, you'll want to know how to transfer contacts and data from Android to iPhone. After all, there's no sense in abandoning your photos, messages, calendar appointments and contact details behind just because you're leaving Android. The unfortunate news is that unless you're setting up an iPhone from scratch, there's no easy way to transfer all of your contacts and data over, except by doing it manually. However the silver lining is that doing so with a box-fresh iPhone is made super easy thanks to a dedicated Apple app. We'll take you through the process below so your jump from Android to iOS is as quick and easy as possible. If you're new to iPhones, then you may also want to learn about how to back up your iPhone, so you can keep all that newly transferred data safe. We've also got a guide on how to use Apple Pay with your iPhone, so you can make contactless payments with ease.1. The first step is to download Apple's dedicated Move to iOS for moving Android data onto its iOS devices. Simply open the Google Play Store, search for 'Move to iOS (opens in new tab)', then download the app. You'll need to give it permission to access your data, otherwise it won't work.2. You can then concentrate on setting up your new iPhone. Go through the set-up process as instructed until you get to the Apps and Data screen. Here, you need to select Move Data from Android. You'll then get a code to input on your Android phone. (Image credit: Apple)3. Back on your old Android phone, open up the Move to iOS app. Agree to the permissions and terms it requires, then go to the Find your Code screen. Here you can input the string of numbers that appeared on the iPhone, which will connect the two phones with a local Wi-Fi connection. Make sure both phones have Wi-Fi enabled otherwise this won't work.4. If you now look at your old Android phone, you'll find the Transfer Data screen, which has a list of things you can send over to the iPhone, including contacts. Select 'contacts' and other data here to transfer then over. Keep in mind that if you don't transfer your other data now, you won't be able to do so later. The only way to perform this step afterwards is to reset the iPhone and transfer your data over again, or by moving your data over manually after set-up. It's therefore worth selecting all of the items you want on your iPhone to transfer now, not just contacts. (Image credit: Apple)5. Now you've got to let the phones do their work. Don't close the Move to iOS app on your Android phone, and wait until your data's moved across. The time this can take will vary significantly depending on how much data you've selected to be moved.6. With your data now on the iPhone, you can finish setting it up without your Android phone. Double-check the Contacts app when you're sent to the home screen, to ensure the transfer was a complete success, before you reset your old Android phone. Whether you've just upgraded to one of the best iPhones or have inherited an older model, learning how to transfer data from iPhone to iPhone will probably be the first thing on your list. Transferring data from one iPhone to another is the natural first step when firing up your device for the first time. Apple fully understands this, which is why it has provided numerous ways to move data between iPhones, including wirelessly through iCloud or by using a computer. And if you're running iOS 15, there's a new process which simplifies the process even further by offering free temporary storage space on iCloud. Ready to transfer data from iPhone to iPhone? Check out the different methods in our guide below. Prepare your iPhone to transfer data With iOS 15, Apple introduced a feature that makes transferring data from iPhone to iPhone even easier. It's called Prepare for New iPhone, and it gives free temporary storage space on iCloud for 21 days to make the process as painless as possible. As long as you transfer your data to your new iPhone within 21 days of triggering the process, this gets around having to pay for extra storage. If that's not long enough, there's an option to request an extra 21 days. Here's how to use this feature.1. First, go to Settings and tap General. Then scroll to the bottom of the screen and tap Transfer or Merge iPhone. (Image credit: Apple)2. The Prepare for New iPhone feature will be available at the top of the screen. Tap Get Started. (Image credit: Apple)3. After reading through the information, tap Continue. (Image credit: Apple) You may then be asked to tap Turn on Backup to Transfer (unless iCloud Backup is already turned on). Select Move All App Data with iCloud and tap Done. Apps and data will start to upload to iCloud. You can check on the backup progress on the main Settings screen. How to transfer data from iPhone to iPhone using iCloud Even if you're not looking to immediately transfer data from one iPhone to another, having a backup of your device will give you peace of mind if your iPhone is ever lost or stolen. The bonus is that the data can be safely held in iCloud, ready for whenever you want to transfer it. 1. To begin, open the Settings app and tap on your name at the top, then tap iCloud. (Image credit: Apple)2. Go through the list of services and decide which apps should and should not use iCloud. Either tap and select On or Off or tap a toggle, depending on the available option. Bear in mind that free iCloud accounts only have 5GB worth of storage space. If you want more than that, tap Manage Storage. You can then select Change Storage Plan and choose a paid option for 50GB, 200GB or 2TB. You will have to increase the amount of space you use if you want to back up your whole iPhone to iCloud. (Image credit: Apple)3. Backups can be made automatically. Just tap iCloud Backup and toggle it on. It's also possible to immediately back up your iPhone to iCloud. To do this, tap Back Up Now. (Image credit: Apple)4. If you're now looking to move your data from one iPhone to another, you'll have a huge bank of stuff to transfer. When you fire up your new iPhone (or one that has been erased and reset), input your language and region and, on the Quick Start page, tap Set Up Manually. Choose a Wi-Fi network, tap Next and wait a few minutes while the iPhone is activated. (Image credit: Apple)5. You can set up things such as TouchID either right away or later. After you've created a passcode for your iPhone, you'll end up on the Apps & Data screen. Here, you can tap Restore from iCloud Backup. Sign in with your iCloud Apple ID and select the most recent iCloud backup. Now you just need to wait while the data is transferred to the new iPhone. (Image credit: Apple) How to transfer data from iPhone to iPhone using Quick Start There's an even easier way to transfer data if you're setting up a new iPhone: Quick Start. It will tie up both your old and new devices for a short while, but it's probably the simplest method to get data to your new iPhone. 1. First, turn on the new iPhone and place the old iPhone next to it. As you do this, a prompt to "Set Up New iPhone" appears. Tap Unlock to Continue. The Apple ID on your old phone will be used for the set-up process. Tap Continue if you're happy for this to happen. (Image credit: Apple)2. An animation will appear on the new iPhone's screen. Hold the animation up to the camera on your old iPhone. Once you see a message stating "Finish on New [Device]", you should then enter your passcode you use for your old device on your new iPhone and follow the set-up instructions. (Image credit: Apple)3. When you reach the Transfer Your Data screen, tap Transfer Directly from iPhone and confirm the settings and data you want to transfer. (Image credit: Apple) How to transfer data from iPhone to iPhone using a Windows PC You can use your Windows PC to transfer data from iPhone to iPhone. Just make sure that your PC has either a Type-C or regular USB port available, depending on the kind of Lightning cable you're using. If you don't already have iTunes on your PC, download and install it first from the Microsoft Store (opens in new tab)1. To backup your old iPhone's data, connect a Lightning cable to the iPhone and connect the other end to your PC. Next, launch iTunes and click Summary on the left-hand side. Under Backups select This Computer then click Back Up Now. (Image credit: Apple)2. When you launch your new iPhone, tap Set Up Manually on the Quick Start page. Follow the on-screen instructions until you reach the Apps & Data screen and tap Restore from Mac or PC.
