Arcanist spell guide pathfinder

While the Aryanists are more often associated with personal power, there are relatively few that are touched by divine or infernal influences, but exist. Those who are touched by such influences are from time to time given indicators from their divine or infernal source, making them a little reminiscent of the oracles and witches of old. However, there are those who turn their backs on such responsibility, while others embrace it and make it their only purpose in life. In both cases, these mages wield powers patrons who other archaists are unable to obtain. (Original concept of Shain Edge) Primary class: Arcanist. Secondary class: Cleric. The alignment of a patron must be within a step of his divinity, along the axis of law/chaos or the good/mal axis. Top dice: d6. Skills and Bonus Classes: The patron's wizard can select three cleric skills to add to his class skills as well as normal arcanist class skills. The patron wizard earns a number of degrees at each level equal to 2 + Int modifier.

444-4 The patron wizard is skillful with all simple weapons, as well as the favorite weapon of his deity. The patron wizard is not skillful with any type of armor or shield. Armor interferes with the gestures of the mage patron, which can cause his spells with somatic components to fail. Cantrips (Sp)This is exactly like the arcanist capacity of the same name, except that the patron wizard can choose his spells of 0-level both from the list of sorcerer/sorczaro spells and the list of cleric/oracle spells. Divine Patronage A patron wizard is a craftsman touched by the gods and granted divine powers to serveOn your own. The mage of the patron must choose a deity to worship. The alignment of the mage of the patron must be within a step of his chosen deity, along the law/chaos axis or the good/mal axis. The mage of the patron also begins to play with a holy symbol (or unholy symbol) at no cost. This symbol is made of wood or iron and is of quality of the processing, but it is not built of any special material. Dominion At the first level, a patron wizard gains the ability to dominate the cleric and selects a domain granted by his deity. It gets its first power domain at 1st level, and its second power domain at 7th level. The patron's wizard also adds his domain spells to his list of spells: it adds its first domain spell to the 1st level, and each spell following the 4th level and each two levels later. These spells are added to the appropriate spell levels. This capacity replaces the arcanist exploits earned at the 1st and 7th level, and consume spells. Casting spontaneously At the 3rd level, a patron wizard can spend 1 point from his arcane basin to channel the incantant energy stored in domain spells that she did not prepare before the time. The patron wizard can "lose" any prepared spell that is not a cantrip to launch any domain spell of the same level of spell or lower. This capacity replaces the arcanist exploits earned at the 3rd and 5th level. New developments of the Arcanist The following new arcanist exploit is limited to the multiclass archetype Patron Mage. Canaling Ray (Su) The mage of the patron can release divine energy fromthe power of his faith through his holy symbol (or displeasure). Passing 1 point from its arcane basin and presenting its holy symbol, the patron mage energy channels that causes a ray that affects a creature of a type (both not dead or alive) within 30 feet of the patron wizard. The type of channelled energy is determined by the alignment of the patron. A good patron magician (or neutral wizard of a good deity) can channel positive energy. A male patron wizard (or a neutral protector magician of an evil deity) channels negative energy. A magic patron who is neither good nor bad and whose divinity is neither good nor bad must choose what kind of energy to channel. Once chosen, it cannot be changed. The amount of damage caused or healed is equal to 1d6 damage points plus 1d6 damage points for each two levels of patron wizard beyond the 1st (2d6 to 3rd, 3d6 to 5th, and so on.) A creature that takes the damage from the channeling radius receives a Save a Will to stop the damage. The DC of this rescue is equal to 10 + 1/2 the level of the wizard of the patron + the modifier Charisma of the patron mage. This capacity works otherwise as the power capacity of the cleric's channel. The patron wizard must be at least at the 5th level to select this exploit. New great explorers of the Arcanist The next new major arcanist exploit is limited to the multiclass archetype Patron Mage. Burst Channel (Up) This works as the ray exploit channeling except the patron wizard can release a wave of energy that affects everyoneof a type (not dead or living) in a radius of 30 feet centered on the patron wizard. Using this exploit emits 2 points from its arcane tank. The mage of the patron must be at least 11th level and have the ray arcanist exploit of channeling to select this exploit. exploit.
