Louisville review submissions manager

We do not accept the hard copy or unsolicited emails. All presentations must be made through our online manager, which is accessible by pressing the "submit the input" button below. You will be redirected to the submissive manager to complete your item after making PayPal payment. If you are not automatically redirected, please contact inreview@indiana.edu and we will ensure you can complete your presentation. Be sure to select the appropriate gender designation in your presentation. If a presentation is made without a gender designation, the presentation will not be read. Cover letters are optional and can be included in the "comments" section of the presentation form. PROVISIONS INDIANA Indiana Review is published in May and December. Our response time is usually 1 - 4 months, but sometimes it can be longer, especially if the job is seriously considered. IR accepts less than half of 1% of the work presented. The payment for the publication is $5.00 per page (minimum $25.00), two copies of the contributor of the number in which their work appears, and one year's subscription. Contributors can purchase additional copies of the number their work is published in a discounted rate. The rights return to the author at the time of publication, but we ask that Indiana Review be credited if the work is reprinted elsewhere. IR publishes about 6-10 stories, 40-60 pages of poetry, 2-4 pieces of non-fiction for emission, as well as occasional art inserts and special sheets. We look for poems, stories and non-fiction that are well realized and lively, have a smart sense of form and language, take on a degree of risk, and have consequences beyond the world of their speakers or narrators. At this moment we do not accept reviews of unsolicited books. There is a reading fee of $3.00 per general submission. If you are an individual subscriber (which means that your subscription is not attached to an IR contest,) enter your subscriber code to send for free; otherwise, leave and continue pressing the presentation button. Please note that sending to Indiana Review, you are aligning your work with the standards outlined in our value statement. Stories and Nonfiction: We consider the prose up to 6,000 words in length, and prefer .doc files that are double-spaced in 12-point Times New Roman with numbered pages. Up to three flash prose pieces (±1,000 words) can be included in one document. Poems: Send 3-6 poems for submission. Do not send more than 4 poems if more than 3 pages each. Please include all poems in one .doc, .docx, or .pdf file. Visual Arts: At this moment we do not accept art presentations. When we are, send up to five pieces that are up to 6 x 9 in size or can be subsequently reduced to this size. Visual works must also be published in black and white, but when funding allows, they can be published in color. Translations: We welcome the work translated among genres. Please make sure you have the right to work before submitting. No need for query editors before submitting the job. Please don't question us about the status of your presentation unless it's been at least six months. IR cannot take into account the work of anyone currently or recently affiliated with the University of Indiana, which includes those who have studied or worked for the UI over the last 4 years. If you have been published in IR, please wait a year before presenting again in the same genre. All the work must be previously unpublished, which includes works published on personal blogs, online magazines or magazines, or any part of a thesis or dissertation that has been published electronically. HOW TO CONTACT A PIECE: If you have presented a simultaneous presentation that is accepted elsewhere or have another reason to withdraw you're asking us to send an email to inreview@indiana.edu with the following information: Name of the author (and, if presented by someone else, the name of the person who presented the job) Date of work was Genre Title of the piece Please note that we are not able to refund the presentation fees in case of withdrawal, or if the writer fails to submit the job within the expected deadline. Discover the mission and work of the Louisville Story Program by watching this video with LSP authors and staff. The Louisville Political Review is the first publication of political university students at the University of Louisville. We welcome the presentations on a wide range of policy topics from university students of all majors and political ideologies. If you are a university student and wish to contribute regularly, we recommend you apply as a personal writer. We also accept submissions from graduate students, faculty, community leaders, students from other universities, and other contributors on a case-by-case basis. Although it is not mandatory, we strongly recommend you fill out the following form before you start on your article as this will save you time and work in the event that our editorial staff does not believe that your article idea is suitable for our publication. However, our editors are willing to help you with anything from a full pitch to drafts. We cannot guarantee that we will post your article as it is, but we will provide feedback within 1-2 weeks. To help you in your writing process, our pitch guidelines and presentations are as follows: Pitch Tips: Focus on depth, not width. We appreciate the items that give a unique perspective. Do in-depth research on your topic from other sources and perspectives. We tend to favor more unique ideas not published elsewhere, so try to write from a refreshing perspective or angle. Opinions are welcome, but it is necessary to make a proper argument consistent with the evidence. Our editors would be more happy to work with you to develop your pitch. It is in your interest to do so, as it can save time in case your idea article might not be suitable for being published. Please fill in the form. Submission format: Articles typically range from 500-1500 words. Articles are usually in the third person, although writers are discussing their personal identity or stories, we will make an exception. Long-time journalism is different from academic writing in essays and documents. They should do a subject or start a conversation on your subject. We recommend you have section titles in your article. Make sure you make them brave. Opinions are welcome, but evidence and sources must be included. Articles must have hyperlinked sources to active verbs. A guideline is 2-4 links per paragraph. If you are unfamiliar with how to connect hypertexts, simply attach page notes in text to sources. Be concise in your language. Try to stay as objective as possible and not partisan when they say facts. The primary audience is university students, so keep your writing accessible and clear. We encourage the use of resources such as Grammarly or the Writing Center to polish your writing. Make sure that writing follows all conventional grammar standards. You'll have to work with our editors before it can be published. We do not accept any plagiarized or published work for the first time in another publication or blog. We will also not publish any work clearly and clearly offensive in nature. The final format should be in Google Docs. Before your article and under the heading of the document, you should have your name, school and year of graduation (or short description of who you are,) email address, and a short 2-3 phrase author bio. Please send the finished project using a Google Docs link both [email protected] and [email protected] with the line object: "LPR: name],[character]". Please include a short bio author in the email. For any other question, email [email protected] You already have accounts? Please login. The AGNI Submission Manager is closed for presentations in June, July and August. Please return on September 1 to send a new job, or feel free to log in now to check the status of an existing presentation. NOTE TO TRANSLATORS: If you want to send to our portfolio 2021 of work translated with the object of "Futures," please feel free to send your document to [agni\[at\]bu.edu](mailto:agni[at]bu.edu). Other emails will NOT be read. Click for the presentation guidelines. Submission Manager is currently in "no presentation". The Louisville Review #90, will open for a seven-day window from 12-July 19, 2021. The Louisville Review accepts unsolicited submissions of narrative and poetry. We only accept unpublished jobs. The response time is 2-4 months. Simultaneous submissions are not accepted. All submissions are considered based on the quality of writing especially. If your job is chosen for publication, we provide two free copies of The Louisville Review to our US-based contributors with a discount on additional copies. International contributors will receive an electronic copy of the problem. We welcome international presentations with English translations. Internal withdrawal may be withdrawn by accessing Presentable. For partial withdrawals (single poems, for person an email to gestr@louisvillereview.org. Fiction Prose submissions should be double distributed and the numbered page. While we do not have a set word limit, please know that our editors are less likely to choose longer pieces simply because it leaves less room in the magazine for other work. Poem Please send up to five poems. Also, please be sure that all poems are in one document before loading. Each page should include complete contact information for the author. Cornerstone Louisville's review accepts previously unpublished poetry submissions from students in K-12 classes. We try to write that embodies fresh ways to recreate scenes and feelings. *The conclusions of Cornerstone must be accompanied by parents' permission to publish if accepted. * Do you have any questions you would like to ask before submitting? Send us an email to admin@louisvillereview.org.
