The intent of this blog is the objective study of the current state of Blue and White Carry Out. A This need to focus on different elements of the property, including the physical structure, people who work there, customers who spend their money and food they buy. A Completing this work requires careful registration of the site and what happens there. This week I spent about 45 minutes sitting on a brick wall across Henry Street watching Carry Out from afar. I was close enough to figure out what was going on out of the store, who walked in and where they went once they left. I wasn't close enough to hear the conversations that took place within the Blue and White or to smell the food that was prepared. From my point of view, one of the first things that stands out was the strange form of the building. A The structure has eight exterior walls of various sizes. A Although technically an octagon, the sides are not symmetrical and is rather uncomfortable as an octagon with equidistant sides. A In addition, the three windows are of different sizes. A I wonder if they were not part of the original building but later added, space allowing. A The blue vinyl shutters accompany two of the three windows. A It seems that the window without shutters was cut by a wall too small to allow shutters. A The lack of shutters on the third window is due to the surrounding environment. A There was room to add a window, Persian or not. But if the third window works perfectly without the shutters, why do the other two have them? They need something on the bigger windows, but not on the small opening near the door? A Looks unlikely. A Then why did the owner of the building decide that it was necessary to add some shutters? According to the Merriam-Webster Dictionary, a shutter is: 1: One who closes 2: a normally mobile cover or screen for a window or door 3: a mechanical device that limits the passage of light; in particular: a component of the camera that allows the light to enter by opening and closing an aperture 4: the mobile louvers in a reed organ through which the swell box is opened The dictionary also states that the first known use of the word "shutter" dates back to 1542. The Revised Unbridged dictionary of Webster of 1913 defines the shutter as: 1: who closes or closes, 2: a removable cover, or a gate, to close an opening of any type, as to close the passage of the molten iron from a siveria. 3: a mobile lid or a screen for a window, designed to close the light, to obstruct or be of some strength as a defense; a blind man. So I know that the shutters found on the buildings have existed for a long time (at least 1542) and were used to cover the windows for at least a century. The definition of 1913 emphasizes the use of a shutter as a defense, perhaps from bad weather or weather. Weatherproof. The enemies. I had not taken into account the use of a shutter to protect me from potential intruders before. I usually block my windows. I did some research on the history of the shutters and I learned that it is not well known. The historians agree that the first shutters were probably built in ancient Greece out of marble or other type of stone. Their purpose was to shield the light and the wind inside the buildings. When the methods of Greek constructions spread from the Mediterranean in continental Europe, it is believed that the first wooden shutters have been created. During medieval times, the shutters were made of wood often and reinforced with iron bars for protection. The windows have become popular with the styles of Elizabethan and Tudor and the shutters were used under the glass panels to filter the light. During the fake shutters of the 1700s they became a popular element of internal architecture in England. This marked the first time they served an aesthetic, rather than functional, purpose. A e in America, large Plantation of the South houses used shutters to control airflow during hot weather. However, non-functional shutters are a popular part of vernacular architecture in America. After starting to look for them, I was amazed at how many windows are flanked by fixed shutters. A, shutters on blue and blank perform are a great example of this. A e While may not be necessary, add to the character of the building. Someone, at some point, I thought there were needed and paid for their installation. Not to mention, add some blue finishes to that white fitting. Windows at the blue and white execution published by brian green on 2 October 2011 Georgia Ave. I bet the food is really good. A, these were my thoughts the first time I saw the small restaurant at the corner of Wythe and North Henry. A, set along the Route 1, thousands of people pass every thousand days. , They have to switch to the blind, which overlooks the small building on their left. A, in fact, when it is reflected on a topic to select for this blog, blue and white immediately arrived in mind. Where is that place? A, mm. I remembered explicitly stumbled at a certain point, but the exact position escaped me. To the google I went and I was a little surprised - and perhaps disappointed ... when I realized that it was not situated on a rear intersection in my neighborhood, but right on the main drag. A point that I have to have passed a dozen or more times, yet I could not place my cognitive map. For something that looks out of place, it is not distinguished and says: "Like a barn on the power of the main road. Decreation in the stature, that the food does most of the talking. A and I'm sure that the story is not hurt. I think some people are attracted by places that have a history, a history, roots. I'm one of these people and it's one of the Reasons that I enjoyed living in Washington, DC, which, like blue and white, obviously has a story to tell. but now, I'm getting settled in my new neighborhood, I'm adapting to what surrounds me and, fortunately, I come across gems like blue and white. A I hope this blog will make me ocire, exploring my new home. A a few weeks ago I realized that I was reluctant to dare and explore something that I loved while living in Washington. boring old town. A of course, there is nothing to see here. Just typing those words makes me feel like a fool for ever thinking about them. A of course, a place called "Old City" has some history that could be interesting and it is worth a look around for an hour or two of my time. Another deterrent investigator in the old city is my main means of transport here. I started driving a bike to go to class, to make errands or meet friends. This is a departure from my days to the right, when almost every commuting involved walking. Although only a few blocks walk from the bus stop or the subway, I had the opportunity to observe, appreciated that until I started mainly cycling. cycling is a little lighter. I'm not a speed demon out there, but now I realize I miss things that I wouldn't miss if I was walking. A this blog will force me to plod, trek, and take note. A I hope this study of a small space gives a context for a larger set. this forum to discuss blue and white in the next three months will force me to see what is missing more while passing wythe and north henry and, in turn, will force me to see elements of my normally veiled behavior. A the two examples of self-observation I have remembered (my lack of enthusiasm in exploring the old city and the new primary means of transport) and how they influenced me are a good start. blue and white is carried out on a Saturday afternoon generalizing about human behavior is silly. It takes a long time to really learn how another person thinks, how we could react in certain situations, and how the variety of emotions we all endure will affect our relationships with others. generalizing on blue and white is also silly. A I still have to eat, but I suppose the food is good. I don't know almost anything about the history of physical space, yet I suppose it's pretty old. A My experiences have led me to these premeditated conclusions, but going forward, I will try to make an opinion on this place only after deepening physical space, its purpose and its history. Let's start. A A this is what I know now. the blue and white carry out is located at the southeast corner of the intersection between wythe the street and north henry street at alexandria, Virginia. A The building is quite small compared to the That surround it. A, the building has white vinyl coating with blue finishes and has three windows, all of different sizes. To the size of the building, signature that The restaurant name and serving A e Lunches & Dinners A e Snacks and Sodas A e. Coca-Cola signage is also present on the building. In a grassy courtyard near the restaurant, there is a container for rejected fryer oil. The container states, between the other, A e Greenlight Biofuels Fryer-to-Fuel A e. There are two garbage jars on a concrete pad behind the restaurant. Crossing the window, only a few meters of space exists for customers to wait after ordering. The kitchen area is divided by glass and the counters look well golden. There is a paper advertising affixed to the glass partition for sweet potato cakes and a small cork with notched cards.
