The books are really structured and covet all that you need to know. There are no grammatical errors and the authors write very well. In general, I think they do a good job of explaining the material. There are, however, some places where there are some mistakes. They need to get an errata going and fix those as fast as possible. Here was my greatest complaint: Sample and simulated testing questions that they provide on the CD is in shape of now or representative form of the difficulty of questions about the real test. I finished this from the CD in about 45 minutes to Time and marked about 90%. In the actual test indeed ineded ineded moment of 2 and a half hours and obtained a much lower score. Of course I still passed. Maybe the Kaplan tests are more realistic. I struggled so much to like the book I could not get into it. I think a lot of the text was unnecessary, too much repetitions that tend to lose the main point, could not even spend some pages even without falling asleep. Sybex looks better written. I'm still waiting to read the comments and chories of other people, so I ask myself if someone reviewed this book before being published . . . I'm just on the page 15 and I came across some serious sloppers . The first example exercise (1-1) does not compile with the current Java compiler. There is a lack of importion of java.nio.*. Secondly, Table1-2, which is referred to in the section entitled "The Declaration of the Package" [SIC] is in the following section, entitled "The Declaration Import" [SIC]. This is also the case in Figure 1-3, referred to in the section entitled "Java Basic Input / Output API", but located in the section entitled "The Javanetworking API". If I wrote code with the same lack of meticulousness inherent in this book, it would be ashamed and would be without work. I hope to see here a response from anyone associated with the publication of this book, but mainly from one or more of the authors, because they are the last ones responsible for the quality of the book.P.s. Both notices "[SIC]" referred to the font font, which must distinguish as a code the words "package" and "imports" in the Total Section.
