Whether you are travelling for work, please or in the middle, moving to a new city can be difficult and scary if you do not have the right information. In today's digital world, you have all the information at your fingertips, especially if you downloaded one of these ten innovative applications that will help you move. Best of all, every app is available for iOS and Android devices. Do you like road trips (or do you have to take them to work)? If so, you cannot go another day without iExit. When you're driving along a big interstate and you're looking for a gas station, a certain kind of restaurant, a reception center, a bathroom, a hotel, a hospital, a drug store or any other place you might need to stop, you can just pull up iExit and find it. The app interrupts every exit on most of the major highways in the United States. CC0/KatieBethToday/Pixabay Google Maps has existed for years, but still reigns supreme when it comes to moving to the city. Find out what kind of public transport is available in the area, what points of interest are nearby and also how crowded are the restaurants and shops you wish to visit at that moment. Get directions to your next destination and find out how long it will take to get there by car, on foot, by public transport or by bike. Anyone travelling abroad will want to download the Mobile Passport app. Use your phone to scan passport data, and you can skip customs lines. Although it is authorized for use by U.S. Customs, keep in mind that it is only accepted at approximately 24 airports, and you must be an American or Canadian citizen, even if these numbers are destined to grow. No one really expects a flight delay, but if you find yourself making one FLIO can help you navigate the airport for everything you need to feel comfortable. Learn how to use Wi-Fi, Wi-Fi, Salts are, what there is to eat in the area and how to get from place to place among other important information. CC0/Katyveldhorst/Pixabay If you prefer to drive to your destination, GasBuddy can be your best friend. It is available in the United States, Australia and Canada, and you can use the app to search for gas stations near your location and compare prices to find the cheapest gas nearby. For some people, there's nothing worse than being stuck in a strange city and having to book a hotel at the last minute. For others, it's part of the thrill of a road trip. No matter which part of the problem you fall on, HotelTonight helps you find the same hotel reservation in the city where you are staying, and those reservations usually come with some decent discounts. You probably already know Uber, but if you're not, the app is a must for your next trip. The redistribution service is available in over 84 countries and hundreds of cities around the world. When you have no idea where you are going, how to get there or simply do not want to sail traffic to a new place, it is a reliable reserve that you can count on virtually anywhere. It's also useful when you've had a little too much to drink or those brand-new bladder shoes on your feet and you can't go back to your hotel. Google Trips is a new app, but it works seamlessly with applications such as Google Maps, Gmail and Calendar to put together an itinerary for your next trip. Search for information such as flight details, hotel reservations and car rental receipts and provide you with a list of things you would like to do in the city where you are traveling. You can also manually select a destination city, and let the app put together a list of things that might interest you there. See you with some free time in a particular city, Sideskix can guide you towards fun and exciting to do. From Amsterdam to Warsaw, with dozens of intermediate points, you can give a look at some of the "best city -Guida" around the world. Are you looking for the best fish restaurant in Boston or the best Havana museum? You will find it on Sidekix. No matter where you go, you have to eat, and find the best place in the city is not always easy. Yelp is an international tool full of local restaurant reviews in the city around the world. In some countries it is more useful than others, and the interior of the United States, you will find more reviews for restaurants in the greatest cities than the country is, but you will receive an honest feedback about the fact that the locals and the other travelers tend to be or not a place to eat. CC0 / Igorovsvannykov / Pixabay Photo Courtesy: Picture Alliance / Getty Images There are thousands of vegetable species known by science, which means that it is almost impossible to store them all. So what do you do when you're out in the world and see a plant you want to know more? Even the most experienced gardener or explorer could have difficulty identifying a unique plant, at least until now. Fortunately, there are several apps for mobile devices that can help you identify almost all the vegetable species you may find. The apps, available for both Android and iOS users, can recognize different types of trees, flowers, vegetables, edible and medicinal plants, aquarium and pond plants, weeds, mushrooms, wild flowers, indoor plants and more. If you find a plant that leaves you perplexed, download one of these apps to help you identify yourself. You can spend hours from scrolling Google images or websites trying to find an online plant that matches what you found. Instead of playing this game to guess, try downloading which is free for iOS and Android devices. This application can help you by instantly identifying thousands of plants, flowers, flowers, and trees with advanced artificial intelligence that are integrated into the software. Photo Courtesy: Dulyanut Swdp/Getty Images All you have to do is take a picture of the plant in question and the app goes to work, identify the species in its plant database and provide information on what it is. After the app scanned a photo, list possible matches. You can then select the plant you think is the closest to the one you found. The user-friendly app recognizes 90% of all known plant species around the world, making it easy to discover what you are looking at (and a little more on it). It's a free app, but it shows advertising. As with most mobile applications, you can pay for a premium version that removes ads, and this is the only difference between the free and premium versions of LeafSnap. PlantNet is similar to LeafSnap as you take a photo of a plant as part of the identification process, and the app can then quickly tell you its name from its database of more than twenty,000 different species. The free iOS and Android app evaluates a plant based on its leaves, flowers, fruits, bark and surrounding habitat. Photo Courtesy: Marko Geber/DigitalVision/Getty Images Once You226; [Sighs] {12; The app is constantly growing and expanding its database, but remember that it focuses more on identifying wildflowers than on helping to identify common plants, trees, herbs and vegetables. The free app also has links to factsheets on different plants, a map that you can build based on your observations and information on the family or the type of species identified. Through the app, you can share your observations with other users. about the possible flora in your surroundings so that you can go out and look for the unique plants yourself. The iOS and Android iNaturalist app is the best app for scientists and naturalists who focus on studying plants, and aims to promote a community where botanists and people interested in biodiversity can share and discuss their observations. In addition, the free app provides high quality and quality information for scientists who are working hard to preserve nature. Developed through a collaboration between the California Academy of Sciences and National Geographic, the app helps users to know the names of plants from photos, but it also provides information on each project's purpose. Photo Courtesy: Cavan Images/Getty Images As a user, you can write your comments and share them in the community. In return, other scientists can provide further information to help you identify the plants. The members of the Community have the opportunity to follow public projects and interact with passionate scientists from all over the world. If you're 128; king a naturalist to, this is the best app to help your search because © gives you access to a team of scientists who are just as curious and motivated to find answers as you are. Incognita Flower helps iOS and Android users to accurately identify plants quickly. As competing applications, you take a picture of the system you want to identify, and almost instantly, the app provides what it considers the best results based on the features you see in the photo. But beyond that, the app shows extensive information on plant toxicity, protection status and distribution. Has an advanced search option so you can add more details to find that you discovered. You can also create observation lists based on your results. Photo Courtesy: Lucy Lambriex/DigitalVision/Getty Images Images Of this app: designed to identify wild plants in Central Europe, so it might not help everyone around the world. It has also not won the users who hope to identify the plants in their home gardens and around their homes. On the other hand, it is a completely free app without advertising, and adds millions of images to its artificial intelligence system, so it is possible that the app will expand into other areas in the future. SmartPlant is a free app for Android and iOS users who, like most in this list, use photos to help you identify plants. However, instead of taking a picture and allowing the App to "read" and determine the name of the plant, take a picture of your mystery plant and use the app to send it to a team of experts who identify the plant for you. Generally you can get results within 24 hours and you also have the opportunity to chat with the team of experts. To use this app, you will need credits. The free version provides one credit per month, but the payment option of the app offers unlimited credits. Courtesy photo: John Slater / Getty Images In addition, you can add plants that you discovered in a "calendar of digital deficiencies", which is ideal for harvesting apartment plants and other species in your outdoor garden. This tool sends you notifications on how to take care of your facilities, monitors progress and tells you when it is time to follow certain assistance steps. As an additional bonus, SmartPlant experts can also identify parasites in your garden. This is by far the most focused customer service app for users- almost like having a plant doctor on the speed dial. compose.
