Assets folder location in android studio

Using ADOBE ROBOHELP HTML 11

HTML in Android Tutorial With Example Posted on May 7, 2016 June 5, 2018 Author Abhishek Studio Categories Android Studio, Archive, Tips It can be noticed that unlike Eclipse ADT (App Development Tools), Android Studio doesn't contain an Assets folder in which we usually use to keep the web files like HTML. Let's make a table to remember the whole scenario easily. Scenario Assets Folder Res / Raw Folder Flexible File Name YES NO Store in subdirectory YES NO Compile-time checking NO YES List filenames at runtime YES NO Filename accessible from XML NO YES How to Create Assets Folder in Android Studio? Now let's discuss how to create an assets folder in the android studio. So let's discuss how the assets folder is different from the Resource Raw folder? In Android one can store the raw asset file like JSON, Text, mp3, HTML, pdf, etc in two possible locations: Both of them appears to be the same, as they can read the file and generate InputStream as below: From assets assets.open(assetPath, filename) // From res/raw resources.openRawResource(resourceRawFilename) But when to use which folder? Below is some guidance that might be helpful to choose. Assets provide a way to add arbitrary files like text, XML, HTML, fonts, music, and video in the application. Navigate to Android option. WebView Tutorial 2. The developer has to know the filename during development, and not runtime. So, in assets, one can read the filename during runtime, list them, and use them dynamically. Flexible File Name: (assets is better) assets: The developer can name the file name in any way, like having capital letters (fileName) or having space (file name), res/raw: In this case, the name of the file is restricted. If one wants to access data untouched, Assets are one way to do it. Now move back to Android Project view, you should be able to see the assets folder now assets folder added More Posts related to Other posts: You may notice that unlike Eclipse ADT Android Studio does not have the Assets folder we use to keep our web files as the HTML. Step 3: Android Studio will open a dialog box. Keep all the default settings. You will have noticed that there is no resource folder that is normally located under the project while working with Eclipse ADT, in Android Studio you got to create it, let's see how it should be done, browse the packages, click on Package we use to see app like the root folder, right-click on it and select: New -> Folder -> Beni folder, click New Folder Assets You would get a dialog box: Create a source root for the resources that will come Included in APK. Under the set of target sources, the Main option must be selected. Right-click on the Go to New -> Folder -> Resource Folder. Next Read: How to add / create local HTML files in the Activities folder in Android Studio Also read: 1. In Res / Raw, you must promptly codify them, maybe in the string resource file. 5. File name accessible by XML: (possible in Res / Raw) Resources: It is not easy for the developer to organize an XML file (eg AndroidManifest.xml) to point to the file in the Resources.RES / RAW folder: in any file XML As Java, the developer can easily access the file in Res / Raw using @Raw / Filename so, if you need to access your file in any XML, put it in the Res / Raw folder. Destination source set: Main creates a main source for resources that will be included in APK Click Finish. Step 2: You will find the application folder and script. How to add RAW resources and folder in Android Studio Step 1: Open your Android studio. Step 4: Now open the app folder. We can do the same things by creating one Raw Resources. But the question is posed: why in the resources folder? Here is the step-by-step process to create an Android studio resource folder: Step 1: To create a resource folder in Android studio open the project in Android as shown in image below.
