Trying to reuse the wheel instead of reinventing it. An image of UnSplashPeter is in the mid-20. He is. © innovative, intelligent and popular among his co-workers. He has great aspirations and wants to reach them. However, he is in a situation where he is caught between his choices. He wants to change his work as many of his friends are doing. But, their conditions are different from the others, what is © quite obviously, because they all have different sets of problems to face as all fingers of a different hand are. Then he lists what he has and what he wants to have in order to get a viable solution to his dilemma. This is © your list: 1. By your organization A very decent payment in comparison to the amount of work done during the office hours. 1.2-Famine/love of life lives close to where he currently lives. 1.3-Supporting and Helpful facilities. 1.4-Cost of manageable work 1.5- Impressive city, incredible weather and easy transport. 1.6- A very cool infrastructure to work with. 1.7- The adequate balance of living with flexible deadlines. 2-Contrast/ Things that make you want to change your job. 2.1-Quality of work © If it sucks. An image of UnsplashAfter that cleans the interviews of various organizations, he is getting a very low increment in comparison to his current income. These increments do not matter, because moving to a new city will obviously be difficult and the expenses will increase. What would you do if you were in Peter's place? Do you mind moving to the job in your hand? Would you expect a dream job to fall into your lap by itself? To be honest, what are the critiques © rivers to change jobs? It's just that the quality of the work matters and nothing else matters. That you need to adapt to conditions and live miserably for some time because work is © All that matters? What if I was in Peter's shoes, what if I was? An alternative solution because you can't stay in this job (since now you are frustrated by the same repetitive work) and other organizations providing offers to you are not very lucrative. We can't waste any time sitting around here since opportunities are not going to fall in your lap because life isn't kind. If we are walking on a road and we encounter a not scalable mountain in front of us, then instead of drilling through the mountain or climbing it, we can also think about going around it. Hear me out first before jumping to any conclusions. Instead of worrying about your work which is producing the primary income without any problems[I mean you have a stable primary income], you should start working in the field where your passion lies or you should create a secondary income. Instead of waiting, we can develop our skills or build a brand which is ever more beneficial, since it would definitely add something up to the pursuit of our dream job. Here some things we can try to make our carry so your mentoring skills will improve along with the knowledge. To do this, you only need to prove to the organization, who knows its business and believes in its cause. To do this, you just need to start working with the organization and start fixing your flow and implementing new features to meet the requirements. 2-Mozilla Winter of Security is similar to Google Summer of Code, but © organised in the autumn of winter by MDN. Find out more about this here. There are tons of projects like this if you look it up on the Internet. 3-Find your favorite coding language. Find yours, such as Cloud, Big Data, Data Mining, AI, ML, etc. After this research of organizations that work in these fields using this language in Git Hub. Find at least 3 of these repositories, a © for beginners. Introduce yourself to your mailing list and then start contributing! 4- Try to start your own brand for a second-level business. This can involve an activity start, a blog site for visits, travel or food, anything you feel you have an opportunity to work in the real world and people crave it. For the early years, do not expect any income. Try to build your brand first. Once your brand will be built, then there will be no stop of cash flows. You can then also leave © your main work.5- Start Freelancing or Go to GinÁsio(An image of unplash)Some facts that need to be clarified:1- The work that was happening in peterää s organization was repetitive. Of course, at first, it was good, then it became repetitive. After some time, there is nothing new to learn.2- Change the hurry © no solution for your problem. The same problem can be repeated in your new job and can be even worse in compared to the previous one. The future cannot be foreseen.3 - Begin to accept that whatever is happening is © your fault and take full responsibility for it. You will definitely be happy.4- It doesn't matter that income comes only from our primary work. Most successful people have many sources of income and also should try © to get a passive source of income.5- If the family/love of life is not © a problem in their life and he is receiving the package of his dreams, then he should change but continue to work on his income/side project or anything he likes.5- I did not mention in detail anything about the balance between work and personal life because the balance between work and personal life is not © something that it's something that comes from within. If it is © Cold air, then the balance between work and personal life © Awesome. The workload determines this to some extent, but in There are tons of project completing, contests to win, challenges to overcome, ideas to be implemented and brands to be constructed. We only have to keep our eyes and our mind open for opportunities. Of course they may stress that I can give all the constructive and productive arguments once I am not in the Peterä € position. It is exactly what I want to arrive, because sometimes the image becomes clearer when looking at the distance. All the complaints and excuses will not change anything, so few ideas may be worth
