How do you reset the airbag light on a toyota avalon tableau de bord image by richard villalon from Fotolia.com You can reset the SRS or airbag light on your Audi using an OBD diagnostic tool. This can be purchased from an auto parts retailer. The OBD diagnostic tool can read the trouble codes from the vehicle's On-Board Diagnostics (OBD) computer. Then, after you have repaired the vehicle, you can also reset and clear the light from the instrument panel using this same tool. If you don't wish to purchase one, you can borrow one from most auto parts stores for free. Usually the mechanic who repairs your Audi will reset the light, but not always. Park on flat, level ground. Look for the OBD II port near the hood release on the Audi. The OBD II port is also known as the OBD II interface or diagnostic port. Once you locate it, connect it to the OBD tool. Put the key into the ignition and turn the vehicle to the "on" position. Look on the face of the diagnostic tool and wait for the trouble codes to display. Look for the "Delete" button or menu command and press it to delete the codes and reset the SRS light. Unplug the OBD diagnostic tool from the port and turn off the vehicle. Wait one minute. Turn on the engine and examine the instrument panel to make sure the SRS or airbag light has turned off. Microchipped Car Key image by Christopher Meder from Fotolia.com The airbag light, or SRS (supplemental restraint system) light, on the GM dashboard shines whenever there is a malfunction with the airbag deployment system. The vehicle needs inspected and fixed to ensure against accidental deployment of the airbag. This light is controlled by a computer and can be shut off using a computerized scan tool that can be purchased from your local auto parts retailer. The parts retailer may let you borrow the scan tool for free to reset your airbag light. Put the key into the ignition and make sure it is in the "Off" position and that the vehicle is in park or, if it's a manual transmission GM, in first gear. Engage the parking brake. Turn the vehicle to the "On" position, but don't start the engine. Plug the computerized scan tool into the diagnostic port under the driver's side dashboard right above the pedals. Use the arrow keys on the face of the scan tool to navigate the menu. Select "Body Control Module," then "Codes," then "Clear All Codes." This will [turn off the airbag light](on the GM's instrument panel. Unplug the computerized scan tool and start the engine. Notice that the SRS light has shut off. keys image by Ramona smiers from Fotolia.com The airbag light on a Kia will illuminate as "SRS," which stands for Supplemental Restraint System. Usually it doesn't illuminate unless the vehicle has been in an accident. If it does turn on, it means there is a malfunction with the airbag system. You should have the vehicle towed to the nearest mechanic or dealership to have it looked at and replaced. Once you have done this, you need to reset the airbag light in order to keep the KIA's computer functioning properly. This process will also turn off the SRS light. Find the rectangular-shaped fuse panel cover on the lower part of the driver's side dashboard. Open it by pulling down on it from the top. Find the largest port inside the fuse panel and check to make sure it is the same size and shape as the connector on the computerized scan tool. Plug the scan tool into this port. Put the key into the ignition and turn it to the "I" position, but don't start the engine. This will power on the scan tool. Look for a command on the computerized scan tool that says "delete codes" or "clear all codes." Select one of these options to reset the computer. When the scan tool indicates that it is finished by returning to the main menu, you should unplug the scan tool from the port. Start the engine and verify that all service and warning lights have turned off of the instrument panel. Speedometer image by Sirena Designs from Fotolia.com You can reset the airbag light on your Mitsubishi right from your home garage or driveway, saving yourself time and money. The airbag light will illuminate on the instrument panel as "SRS," which stands for "Supplemental Restraint System." Usually this light only turns on when the vehicle has been in an accident. If you see it turn on while you are driving, pull over immediately and call a tow truck. The vehicle should not be driven until it has been looked at and repaired by a qualified mechanic. Once the repairs have been made, you or your mechanic should reset the airbag light to keep the computer functioning properly and to shut off the SRS warning light. Put the key into the ignition and turn it to the "Acc" position, but don't allow the engine to turn over. Plug the OBD-II scanner into the diagnostic port under the steering column. Wait for the scanner to read the codes and then press "Clear trouble codes" or "Reset" or some similar command to reset the airbag light. Unplug the scanner from the port and start the engine. Verify that the SRS light has turned off. how do you reset the airbag light on a toyota. how to reset your airbag light. how do you reset your airbag light
